

GIFA AND CHINA DIECASTING 2019 Trade Show Review

"Two big trade shows in four weeks with such hot weather was a challenge, both for the visitors as well as the exhibitors.

We would like to say thank you to all the visitors for their interest and for the many interesting conversations that we shared at the trade show."

Helmut Geiger

Helmut Geiger, Managing Director

At the GIFA 2019 we were able to greet many international partners at our booth. This shows that interest continues to exist for such important events.

As always, the GIFA was a welcome occasion to learn about the newest trends and developments, and provided an opportunity to exchange views on the current market situation and the question of how things will progress in the future.

A definitive answer was not found in this case.

The China Diecasting 2019 in Shanghai was also enthusiastically received and was well-visited.

It has become clear that the Chinese market is extremely technically oriented and is very open to all new developments.

Whether with structural die casting or minimum quantity spraying, everything is already being put into practice, and with very good results.
